

Last updated July 8, 2025

About IFIC

The International Food Information Council (IFIC) is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization based in Washington, D.C., established in 1985. Our mission is to effectively communicate science-based information about food safety, nutrition and sustainable food systems, serving the public good.

The content on IFIC.org is grounded in peer-reviewed research and informed by the work of recognized scientific and public health authorities.

Our team includes experts in science, health and communications who turn research into practical insights to help stakeholders communicate with credibility and impact.

IFIC primarily engages healthcare professionals, communicators, and others who influence consumer food choices, as well as informed consumers seeking credible information.

IFIC is governed by a Board of Trustees – primarily from public academic institutions – and advised by an Assembly that includes liaisons from government agencies.

IFIC is funded primarily through grants and contributions from a wide range of organizations across the food, beverage, and agriculture sectors. IFIC does not lobby or represent any individual product, company or industry.

Usage Note

All materials provided in this media kit are available for public use with proper attribution to the International Food Information Council (IFIC).